Karolina, a wedding accessories designer has created this cosy home with big terraces for herself and 2 daughters.

Karolina and her daughters – 15-year-old Mia and 13-year-old Nel – live in a terrace house in the Wilczy Młyn district in Poznań. Karolina got the house from her parents, or actually swapped her apartment with them. The building was built 20 years ago, so Karolina decided to make a little revolution in it. She demolished several walls and glazed the entire wall leading to the terrace and garden. Today, the interior looks almost as she wanted. She added her own furniture to the furniture that was left by her parents, such as a Biedermeier sideboard and an old piano. She wanted the interior to be relaxed and have a touch of nonchalance. Modern chairs were placed next to the old chairs at the dining room table. A glass twig lamp hung over it. Apart from the sofa, there is also a swing in the living room. At first, it hung low so that the children would not hurt themselves. Now it is higher and has become a favorite place of guests. It was made by Karolina's dad, an engineer and a real handyman. In addition to the home, this address is also the heart of Karolina's business. On the ground floor, in the Decolove atelier, Karolina creates unique decorations for ladies and gentlemen. The domain of Decolove are wedding decorations embedded in a retro style. Karolina puts all her heart and a lot of positive energy into everything she creates.
